Local information

Tudor Cottage is located in Peppard Common, a hamlet with a strong community feel just 5 miles from Henley-on-Thames. The property offers the opportunity to live in a secluded historic house with a rural feel, just moments away from the shops in the thriving village of Sonning Common. There are a handful of useful shops and amenities, a small supermarket, post office and award winning health centre. More comprehensive leisure and shopping facilities including a supermarket, cafes and restaurants are available in Henley-on-Thames and Reading (6 miles).

Local primary schools include Peppard, Kidmore End and Sonning Common and are all rated good or outstanding. Gillotts School, Chiltern Edge and Henley College offer secondary and 6th form education with many fee-paying schools available also.

Accommodation

The front of the cottage is 'chocolate-box' pretty and quaint, with timber framing and painted brick infills. The front door opens to the kitchen. This is a bright room fitted with cupboards, shelving and appliances and overlooking the rear garden. The living room has exposed ceiling beams and an electric wood-burning stove. There is a second similar reception room, used as a dining room, that includes an open fireplace and a side door to the garden. A useful study is at the rear, off this room. There is a ground floor bathroom and two upstairs double bedrooms, both accessed from their own private staircase.

Outside space

The house sits back from the road, creating a large, gated gravel driveway, enclosed by tall hedges and trees for privacy. A side garden includes a shed and patio for seating. The garden gives a peaceful aspect, with raised flower beds, brick and gravel patios and a further raised seating area.
